Hi Travis,

I hope you're doing well. Do you know if your client's Amazon assets were released? We received no response from Amazon directly but we're unsure if they simply fulfilled the request.

Thanks,

Good afternoon Marwa,

Likewise and hope you had a nice weekend. Unfortunately Amazon has not released their account hold and this is causing some serious damage creating even more urgency here.

First, can you provide Amazon's counsel with some form of follow up to ensure the request was received and processed? I have been trying with Amazon directly, but have not spoken with anybody at DWT nor did I see any reply to our email chain.

Second, can we also move towards an agreement on a release for this seller? We can substantiate with any further proof you need and can make the settlement conditional upon the accuracy of what my client is presenting. I believe that this agreement in conjunction with your efforts may help to convince Amazon to release the hold on their funds.

Hi Travis,

Thanks for the update. I am discussing this with my team and hope to get back to you in a few hours on the best course of action to get your client's account released.

Marwa

Good morning,

Understood. Please let us know as soon as possible. Any action going forward with respect to DWT's release of my client's assets?

Good morning Travis,

Our client has declined to move forward with a release for your client. At this time, our client has asserted no claims against your identified client, we never requested that your client's assets be restrained, and we have advised Amazon that we believe the preliminary injunction does not call for such a restraint. Therefore, at this point, our client does not see the purpose in pursuing a release and we do not see what role remains for our client. We recommend reaching out directly to Amazon or Amazon's counsel at DWT for redress.
